Imagine a horizontal rod on which ants crawl, all with the same speed. Some are crawling to the left, some to the right. When two of them collide, each of these two change direction (but keep the same speed). When the right end of the rod is reached, they change direction, too. When the left end is reached, they fall off the rod. How long does it take until all of them have fallen off?